What projects can be submitted:

ZMINA: Rebuilding program will support projects that contribute to the research and development of Ukraine's rebuilding themes and cover one or more types bellow:

- focused on concrete creative practices contributing to wartime resilience and post-war recovery in Ukraine, preservation and construction of new identities, social norms, communities, relationships, infrastructure, decolonization, building new cultural narratives, cultural urbanistic planning, etc.
- highlight the essential and unique role of the cultural and creative sector in social and economic (re-)development, now and in the future.

- are aimed at achieving results in specific creative forms that have a physical manifestation and can be disseminated to other local communities.

National projects should create and archive specific works and best practices that can be shared with other communities.

All projects should be aimed at working with specific local communities and must include interaction/engagement with audiences on resilience, rebuilding, or reconstruction, taken in their broadest sense (film screenings, photo-viewing, discussions, theater workshops, co-design of ideal living spaces, prototyping, etc.).

Projects that integrate New European Bauhaus' main focuses of beautiful, inclusive and sustainable projects will be more preferable among projects with the same score.

- beautiful are the places, practices, and experiences that are enriching, inspired by art and culture, responding to needs beyond functionality,
- inclusive: encouraging dialogue across cultures, disciplines, genders and ages,
- sustainable: in harmony with nature, the environment, and our planet.
